"You can tell more about how a person will react in a business situation from one round of golf than in a hundred hours of meetings"

...Mark McCormick author
What They Don't Teach You at Harvard Business School

Business leaders make deals on the golf course. The course can be considered a board room...others are watching and listening but each has his own agenda. Do you know how to best interact with people that do not see things your way?

HOW you present yourself on the course is more important than what you shoot. Golf is a game of integrity, honor, character, and trust. What do you reveal about your character on the course?

This full day seminar begins in the classroom where you will become aware of your personal behavior style, learn to detect and discern the styles of others, and apply these tools to reach your goals. It is then onto the range where you will learn to become clear, comfortable, and confident with your swing, followed by an eighteen hole guided playing experience, giving you the opportunity to implement your new skills.
